Eligibility for the DSP
Children with mild developmental needs are highlighted by their preschool teachers and screened by the LSEds to determine if they need the DSP. Children who need higher levels of support than the DSP are referred to other intervention programmes (e.g. EIPIC centres).

DSP Packages
When identified, a child with mild developmental needs is offered either the Learning Support or Therapy Package. The packages focus on the following areas of development:

- Attention & Behaviour
- Fine Motor & Handwriting skills
- Gross Motor Skills
- Language Development
- Literacy Development
- Social-emotional Skills
- Speech Development

Development Support Programme (DSP)
The DSP is an early intervention programme for pre-schoolers with mild developmental needs. The DSP provides targeted short-term support through a group of trained Learning Support Educators (LSEds), clinical professionals and therapists in the preschools. It adopts an integrated community-family based approach (see diagram below).

More about the DSP
The DSP helps parents and teachers recognise developmental needs in a timely manner. It provides relevant information, intervention and support for the child and family. Children with mild developmental needs receive extra help through interventions and in-class support sessions. The DSP equips children with age-appropriate skills to optimise learning in the preschools and be ready for primary education.

Learning Support Package
Supported by the LSEds, this package is carried out on an individual or small group basis once a week for 45 minutes, over 6 or 10 weeks. It focuses on language, literacy, handwriting and social skills. Its intensity is adjusted according to the child’s needs.

Therapy Package
Children requiring individual and specialised intervention are referred to a focused, short-term intervention by therapists. These children are supported once a week for 45 minutes over 10 or 15 weeks. Areas of intervention include occupational, speech-language, learning support or psychology.
